The Brandon Daily Mail.

MONDAY, JULY 8, 1885.

By reference to our legislative summary it will be seen that in the House on Friday last the Government took the first step towards dealing with the matter of the eastern boundary of the province. The address to Her Majesty, which was moved by Hon. Mr. Norquay, asks that the eastern boundary be so defined as to remove all doubt in the matter. Now that our Legislature has taken action, we hope that the vexed question will be determined without unnecessary delay, if for no other reason than to see the unpleasant conflict of jurisdiction, within the disputed territory brought to an end.

The Manitoba Free Press, in the course of a leading article in a late issue on the subject of Manitoba's insufficient revenue, says:—"The Dominion Government has not only evidenced a fixed determination not to deal generously with Manitoba, but has announced and unmistakably shown a determination to sacrifice our interests whenever occasion shall arise to the requirements or demands of the Eastern Province." If the Dominion Government were to consent to every demand that the Free Press and the Grit party make, the Province would become a Supreme Republic, having nothing to do with the Dominion, but as it is an integral portion of the Confederation it has to be dealt with as such. When Alexander Mackenzie and the Grits were in power they treated Manitoba as the Colony of Colony. Under the direction of Sir John A. Macdonald and the Conservative party, Manitoba and the Northwest have progressed and prospered to an extent unprecedented in provincial history. This we know the Free Press will not admit, as it would prefer to attribute the prosperity of the North-west to any other cause than to acknowledge that this prosperity is largely owing to the policy of Sir John and his government.

The Manitoba Free Press never loses an opportunity of opposing the acquisition by this Province of the eastern territory. From the stand which it has taken in this question one would almost conclude that the Free Press was published in some small Grit town in the lake province. One of its arguments is to belittle the whole territory from a Manitoba point of view, but when it views the matter from an Ontario stand-point, its estimate is diametrically opposite. We think that Mr. Norquay's position in reference to eastern territorial boundary is just, sensible and patriotic. If Manitoba must stand up for its rights, as the Free Press alleges it does not, the eastern boundary is one of its rights. The Grits are not prepared to admit this, as they want all the territory they can grab for Ontario. This is really the dimensions of the question. Of course the Free Press, being a loyal Grit organ, must acquiesce in the party mandate, no matter how much it may interfere with its pretensions as an advocate of Provincial Rights.

The scarcity of the circulating medium is just now a serious problem all over the province. The stringency in the money market does not promise to relax before fall. Everything seems to be plentiful, except cash itself. The scarcity is doubtless due to the fact that the real estate boom has very properly ended, and there is not now much money being imported, and no great importation of capital will take place until the present crops are harvested. It is in times like these that the strictest retrenchment must be observed. The stopping off of unnecessary expenses is one of the ways by which to survive hard times, for these persist in periodically visiting the best regulated communities.

The prorogation of the Local Legislature, on Saturday, closed up the legislative business for the year. The most important Bill of the Session was undoubtedly the Municipal Bill, which, according to the legislative reports, was very much improved and amended in committee. Public interest will now centre in the forthcoming Inter-provincial Convention.

High Sentences.

Though style is not properly the dress of thought, there is yet a striking analogy between the custom of a period and its literary style. The peaked beard, the starched collar, the trunk hose, and the quilted doublet of Bacod, Sydney and Spencer are in singular keeping with high sentence, the quaint fancies, and the rich decorations of their style. In Pope's day—the day of powdered queues, and purple velvet doublets, of beaux with cocked hats and lace ruffles, and belles with patches on their cheeks—men dressed their thoughts as fantastically as they did their bodies. As they carried snuff-boxes and rapiers, so they put titillating ingredients into their sentences and stabbed each other with epigrams. To-day's dress—at least men's dress—is plain and business-like, no waste of material nor colors to attract attention. Our style is to that of the golden age of English literature what the frock coat and the stovepipe are to the doublet and the plumed hat.

Grit.

The force of will is a potent element in determining longevity. This single point must be granted without argument, that of two men, every way alike and similarly circumstanced the one who has the greater courage and grit will be the longer lived. One does not need to practice medicine to learn that men die that might just as well live if they resolved to live, and that myriads who are invalids could become strong if they had the native or acquired will to vow they would do so. Those who have no other quality favorable to life, whose bodily organs are nearly all diseased, to whom each day is a day of pain, who are beset by life-shortening influences yet do live by will alone.

Incisances.

The American Queen, the New York society paper, gives the following list of "incisances" to be abated:

Ladies who wear Gainsborough hats to theaters and don't sit on the backs seats.

Girls who mistake impertinence for wit, and immodesty for good breeding.

Children who insist on loudly airing their opinions and taking part in general conversation.

Rich and vulgar men who fancy that it is aristocratic to be uncivil.

Newspapers which think there is no news worth printing excepting the details of crime.

Wealthy people who have to resort to arrangements of manner to prevent their taste vulgarity from being detected.

Society people who (in the presence of other society people) pretend that they have a great horror of reporters "great talkers of wopals."

Fastidious people who think there is some more "polite" way of talking than when their mouths for the full volume of breath and to articulate distinctly.

Crude people who overwork the adjectives "awful" and "splendid."

Breathe Through the Nose.

In cool weather the rough labour course of the air through the narrow nostrils causes it somewhat before it strikes the larynx (the vocal box), whose surpassing capacity of construction renders it peculiarly liable to harm. Many a case of enlarged tonsils, larynx, or lungs, is due to breathing through the mouth and not through the nose.

The best medical authorities now assume that the serious harm which so often results from nasal catarrh is caused, not by any "dropping" of diseased mucus from the head, but by the simple fact that the nasal passages become swollen and partially closed, the person breathes only through the mouth.

Wherever the air is loaded with infection—in sick-rooms; in the open air, during the prevalence of epidemics; in malarial districts, especially at night, when the system is especially liable to be infected; in the cars and all crowded gatherings, for we never know when there are infected parties present—the rule should be observed, to breathe through the nose. Persons who do are less likely to take disease. The morbid particles are quite likely to lodge on the moist sides of the nasal passages, and thence to be washed out.

When the air is loaded with dust—when sweeping rooms, beating carpets, stirring ashes, shoveling coal, facing clouds of dust in the streets, filing iron and other metals as a business, and working in various kinds of mills—it is exceedingly important that the rule be observed.

One should train himself to sleep with closed mouth. For this purpose, he should avoid lying on his back, in which posture the mouth is much more likely to open than in any other position of the body. The danger is increased by the mouth becoming dry, and thus less able to arrest the particles of dust or any floating minims.—Youth's Companion.

FOOT-KISSING.

In Theophile Gautier's "Constantinople of To-day" there is an account of the ceremony of kissing the Sultan's toe, an honor which is reserved for the Vicer, Ministers and certain privileged Pashas. This act of homage is performed with the utmost solemnity, and is marked by every sign of respect worthy of so important an occasion. Referring to the custom of kissing the Pope's toe, Matthew, of Westminster, thus explains its origin: Formerly it was usual to kiss the hand of his Holiness, but toward the close of the eighth century a certain woman, when making an offering to the Pope, not only kissed his hand, but committed the terrible mistake of squeezing it. The Pope, seeing the danger to which he was thus exposed, cut off his hand, and by this means escaped the contamination to which he had been rendered liable. Since that time the precaution has been taken of kissing the Pope's toe instead of his hand; and lest any one should doubt the accuracy of this account, the historian argues that the hand which had been cut off 500 or 600 years before still existed at Rome—a standing miracle, since it was preserved in its original state, free from corruption. When the ceremony of kissing the Pope's toe takes place, he wears on the crown a shaper with a cross. We take note here that kissing the foot is a common Oriental sign of respect, and is not to have been introduced into the West by the latter Roman Emperors, whose court ceremonies were mixed with many servile customs.—Belgravia.

Stopped the Proceedings.

"I came in to tell you that you might as well stop them proceedings in chancery for a bill of divorce," said a soft eyed thing about 27 years old, as she came into a Laramie lawyer's office.

"Decided to live together as man and wife again, hey?"

"No, not that. Not that. You see Obadiah strolled away to Leadville two years ago, and kind of give me and the kids the grand shake. Since then I've been rustling in my gentle, unobtrusive manner to make a stake. I've wrote to him occasionally whenever I had leisure, and kind of rounded him up for not chipping in with his assessment, but he never represented.

"That kind of irritated me, and I asked you last week to get me a divorce. If I paid all the assessments myself I thought 'twould be no more than square to get all the dividends. But this morning I got news from Leadville that has changed my notion a little about the divorce."

"Sent you some money, did he?"

"No, not that. He didn't even write to me, but I got a paper with a big blue mark around a piece in it, which conveyed the intelligence that Obadiah was hung there on the 19th by request."

"It seems that he got to jumping lots and stealing horses between meals, and people got down on him. Then he salted a claim over on Buckskin, and sold it for $10,000 to a tender-foot from away down East."

"We made several flowery breaks like that, and the popular feeling seemed more or less turned against him. Several weeks ago Obadiah stole a pair of big mules from a man who belonged in Kokomo, and next night went back to get a neckyoke and monkey-wrench that belonged to the wagon, and happened to run into a passle of vigilantes looking for a job. They took Obadiah over to a tall, limber tree, and let him stand on a bronco pony plug under the lowest limb while they tied a clothesline around his windpipe."

"Obadiah told them that he wasn't much of a bare-back rider, and he didn't know whether he could do the trick or not. They slid the clothesline over the limb and hit the bronco a lick with a quirt."

"The bronco was a high-plug, and had been raised in luxury, so he got mad when they hit him and he lit out some. That left Obadiah in a good deal of suspense. He wiggled around a little and got embarrassed, and didn't seem to know what to do with his hands for a while. Then he became more calm and composed in his manner, and the crowd made a present of him to the coroner. I wrote to the authorities to send me his check book and a statement of Obadiah's bank account, and whatever you're out on this divorce hooraw will be all right, understand. I'd rather let the Almighty and the vigilantes fix up my law business than to die of old age waiting for chancery, anyhow. That's the kind of griet-stricken relic I am."

LOCAL NEWS.

J. L. WOODWORTH Esq. M. P. P. returned from the capital to-day.

The steamer "Alpha" left her mooring this morning for Port Ellice with a cargo of lumber, and farming implements.

A great many of our citizens, taking advantage of the fine weather, went out driving yesterday in all directions.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of Messrs Whitehead & Whitelaw, in another column.—House to be let, cheap rental.

Mr. M. P. Zindold, who has been in the city for a couple of days purchasing lumber for the purpose of building the Parliament buildings at Regina, left for home this afternoon.

Notice.—Members will please return the rifles in their possession at once, to the armory, for inspection. By order, G. P. Bliss, Ensign, Secretary B.R.A.

Rev. John A. Logan, of Londonderry, N. S., has been spending a few weeks in the Northwest called on us this morning. He expressed himself greatly pleased with the N. W. as a farming country. We understand that he intends returning home this afternoon.

Yesterday morning a fire was discovered by a fireman on the roof of A. Plante's, boarding house, but instead of sounding an alarm, he and several others proceeded to the burning roof and quenched the flames with a few buckets of water. The fire was caused by a defective stove-pipe.

Two dusky reds called at Mr. W. A. McDonald's office this morning, and stood looking up at the barrister's office as if they had a writ of habeas corpus on hand. Mac was not certain whether they were after an ad quod lampoon or a mandamus, on account of the fact that they spoke Sioux, while Mac was trying to think in Chippewa, and there was no one about who spoke Chintox.

There was some fighting going on along the line the other day. On the eastern bound train were the individuals who insisted on fighting it out. They were not permitted to fight on the train, but when they reached Moosemen, they stepped out on the platform and went for each other like greased lightning. The vigilant police of those ambitious beings stepped the fun and put the bellegers on the train. War was to have been renewed as soon as the train reached Brandon: the ten minutes there were to be utilized by the fighting pair to the best advantage. It was fighting under difficulties without doubt.

Mr. McGregor and son bound for the Prince Albert district and Mr. Daniel Stewart bound to Deloraine were passengers in the train yesterday from the east. These parties complain that they were very much delayed by the railways in the United States having been thirteen days on the road from Ontario. The Messrs McGregor further complain of provoking detention at Emerson owing to some customs mistakes but not on their part.

A representative of the Mail called this morning on Mr. Lang's scenic artist and painter corner of Rosser Avenue and Tenth street and was shown by Mr. Lang a new banner that he is executing for Milford L.O.C. On the full side is a picture of William Prince of Orange from the National gallery. Surrounding the picture which is in full oval relief is the Crown and in scroll inscription surmounting—1688—1690 Religion Union Charity, Stability.

William the III. glorious and immortal memory. On each side in the margin are Boyne, Aughrim, Derry and Enniskillen.

At the foot
No 1503,

On the obverse side is the Crown while in an oval centre is the Holy Bible open with scroll inscription surmounting—1688—1690 Religion Union Charity, Stability.

Milford L. O. L.
The material is the best French merino and it is to be bordered with Royal purple fringe. The banner is 7 feet long by 2 feet wide. In a corner is the Union Jack. It is to be unfurled at Milford on the 12th when the brethren have a fitting demonstration. The workmanship reflects credit on the artist Mr. Lang.

On Saturday afternoon about one o'clock two young men named Smith while returning home from the country the wagon seat broke precipitating the two occupants who fell under the wheels. One of the wheels passed over the neck of one of the occupants and over the leg of the other. They were both more or less injured but not seriously.

We are requested to announce that the strawberry festival in connection with the C. M. Church will take place on next Wednesday evening instead of Thursday evening, as previously stated in the Mail. The band could not be obtained for Thursday and this is the reason of the change. The festival takes place in the skating rink, and the management are doing everything towards making the festival a pleasant success.

NOTE FROM EDITOR TO COMPOSITOR.
Ellis Yorke finds fault with proofs of her story. Says "you correct her manuscript incorrectly," that you have substituted the word "wonderous" for "wondrous," that there is no such word as "wonderous," that you made "over-ripe" a single word, when it is a compound one; that, in short, you do not understand your business or are deluded.

NOTE FROM COMPOSITOR TO EDITOR.

SIR: Ellis Yorke is mistaken in more points than one. There is such a word as "wonderous." Let her look in Webster's Unabridged, page 1,523, first volume, sixth line from the top, and she will find it. Also "overripe" is not a compound word. Evidently she does not know the signs by which compound words are distinguished, or she would not be so decided in her assertions.

And, with all due respect to her opinion, I am not "deluded," and I do understand my business. Furthermore, if mistakes are made, it is because Ellis Yorke's manuscript is most illegible. Her "r's" and "s's" and "b's" are all alike, and her "t's" and "d's" might stand for almost anything; and as for punctuation!

I assure you I'd rather set up all the rest of your paper than one of her shortest articles.

NOTE FROM ELLIS YORKE TO COMPOSITOR.

SIR: The editor has shown me your important remarks, and, though he chooses to look upon our quarrel, as he calls it, in the light of a joke, I regard it as a serious matter.

Because you happen to be right about those detestable words "wonderous" and "overripe," that is no reason why you should vilify my manuscript.

You may not be aware of it, but I took the gold medal for penmanship when I graduated at Posthaste Institute last year, and never before—although I have been writing for the New York press for over six months—have I had its legibility called in question. And I won't stand it! I demand from you my story, as the editor refuses to procure it for me. You shall no longer sneer at my "r's" and "s's" and "t's" and "b's."

NOTE FROM COMPOSITOR TO ELLIS YORKE.
MADAM: I cannot return manuscript placed in my hands. I wish I could—how gladly I would return yours!

WHAT SHE DID AND SAID.

Then I resolved to hear the lion in his den—to go to the printing office, ask for Hugh Bassett, and, with a few preliminary sarcastic observations, request the return of "The Tragedy of Winona Dell."

I went. The devil requested me to be seated while he called my enemy.

I prepared to meet him (hateful old thing with a terrible frown, when, to my great astonishment, instead of a hateful old thing a tall, handsome young fellow, with sunny hair, eyes like spring violets, and hair that suggested buttercups and dandelions, advanced toward me.

It was he—and I said, "I beg pardon for the rude things I have written to you—and I hope you'll forgive me—and I'm sorry I wrote so badly, and I don't know how to punctuate, and—"

Good gracious! I didn't intend to say anything of the sort.

WHAT HE SAID.

I stepped from my case, and a pretty, girlish face looked up at me with a frown that quickly melted away into a most bewitching smile.

Ellis Yorke! I don't know why, but I knew her in a moment, and noted with a heart pang how poorly she was dressed to brave the cold of a winter's day. Evidently her "over six months' writing for the New York press" had not filled her purse.

"I beg your pardon," she said, in a sweet, low voice, raising a pair of the loveliest gray eyes to my face. And then she added, "I'm sorry I write so badly."

"Don't mention it," I stammered, "I didn't mean a word of it. I only wish I could set up your beautiful stories forever."

"And the 'r's' and 't's' and 's's' and 'b's'?" said the sunny, pretty, poor little girl.

"Are perfection," I replied.

The proof I sent away that afternoon, a libelation on "Darwin and His Peculiar Theories," was returned to me with the question, "What the deuce do you mean by placing 'The Yorke's name as author of this article instead of Dr. Megatheros Bluno?'"

THE END OF IT.

Married, April 10th, by the Rev. A. B. Osborn, this Yorke to Hugh Bassett.

MARGARET EYTHRO.

How Sponges are Caught.

A correspondent of a New Haven paper tells how they fish for sponges in the Bahamas: When a vessel arrives at the fishing ground it is anchored and the men, in small boats, proceed to look for sponges in the water below. The water is a beautiful light blue color, and so clear that a sixpence can easily be seen on the white, sandy bottom in thirty-five to forty feet of water. Of course when there is no wind and the surface of the water is still, the sponges are easily seen; but when a gentle breeze is blowing a "sea-glass" is used. A sea-glass consists of a square pine box about twenty inches in length, a pane of glass about ten by twelve inches placed in one end, water-tight. To use it the glass end is thrust into the water, and the face of the operator is placed close to the other. By this means the wave motion of the water is overcome and the bottom readily seen. Sponges, when seen at the bottom attached to rocks, look like a big black bunch. They are pulled off their natural beds by forked tools, which are run down under the sponge, which is formed like the head of a cabbage, and the roots pulled from the rocks. When brought to the surface it is a mass of soft, glutinous stuff, which to the touch feels like soap or thick jelly. When a small boat load is obtained they are taken to the shore, where a crawl is built in which they are placed to dry, so that the jelly substance will readily separate from the firm fibre of the sponge. These crawls are built by sticking pieces of the brush into the sand out of the water, large enough to contain the catch. It takes from five to six days for the insect to die, when the sponges are beaten with small sticks, and the black, glutinous substance falls off, leaving the sponge, after a thorough washing, ready for market. To the fisherman generally the occupation is not a lucrative one. I am told the wages will hardly average three dollars per week besides board. There is but little diving for sponges, except for a particularly fine bunch which cannot be gotten by the hook. The sponge is formed by small insects, and is the hive in which they live. Different qualities are found growing side by side, although in certain regions the finer and more valuable sponges are found.
